Famine and Pestilence Follow Worst Storm in History of Country

Officials say the train was derailed by a washout and a washout which prevented it from going back to any station. Train and passengers are reported safe. Provisions and blankets for the train were not affected.

A large force of repair men started south today from Jackson, Miss., and have the tracks opened as far as Manchac and are pushing their way south as far as possible.

Further south run through the tracks and the work is very slow. Seven miles of track were found washed out at one place. Nine dead bodies were found at one station.

New Orleans, Sept. 23.—(United Press.)—Official reports reaching here today from the storm swept district shows that the damage is as great as the earlier reports indicated and will amount to between three and four hundred. Of this number more than 200 have been killed and the rest are dead, 40 having already been identified.

From the interior of the State fatalities are reported to the number of 200 and the revised figures show that 100 are dead along the coast outside of Terrebonne.

A fervent appeal for immediate help was brought here today by the sheriff of Terrebonne who stated that there is grave danger of both famine and pestilence. In response to his request physicians and medical supplies and medicine should be sent as soon as it can be secured.

The apprehension felt as to the fate of the inhabitants of Grand Island was set at rest when a boat from there arrived here. There was no loss of life there although many houses were unroofed and blown down and the negro quarter practically wiped out.

Two-thirds of the entire cotton crop in this state, Lower Mississippi and Alabama is a total loss having been beaten to the ground on blow from the bolles from the force of the combined wind and rain. The loss of sugar cane and rice will probably amount to fully one-third of the total crop and many of the smaller plantations are completely ruined.

The arrival from Terrebonne state that the situation there is the most serious in the history of the State. The corpses are being washed up by the river and the bodies are being blown about by the wind and rain. Hardly a house is left standing and the homeless are absolutely without food. Systematic work will be begun at once, the Governor has appointed committees to make charge of this work.

Heavy damage has been done in New Orleans. Street car tracks have been practically all destroyed. Electric light poles were blown down and the lighting system badly crippled. The machine side of the Hotel Grunwald, five feet above the sidewalk, were blown down. A big pavilion was blown down. Scores of private residences were damaged and the roof blown from a school building. A big wharf used by a fruit company collapsed and toppled into the river. The wharf was partially of steel construction. The wireless station is located at the top of the Hotel Grunwald and the falling towers put it out of commission so that only a few messages have been sent or received since the storm began.

Telegraph companies say that their wires will not be working properly before Friday and at present the only communication between New Orleans and the outside world is through Harrisburg. Relief trains sent from various headquarters have been able to push their way forward slowly. A relief train sent from Jackson, Miss., got as far south as Manchac Pass, where the bodies of eight victims were found. From there south the line was blocked and the train could get no further.

DRUGGISTS MUST OBSERVE LAW OF SELF PRESERVATION

Can No Longer Serve the "Cramp" Victim on Sunday.

NEW LAW MOST DRASTIC

No matter how strong you stand with your drug store man in the future that old gag of having cramps on a Sunday morning will not have any effect in getting the druggist to put out a few drops of spirits for a cramp.

The only way that any liquor can be secured in a drug store in the future is by going to a physician and securing a prescription for it. If you don't believe it take a drop into the store where it has been your wont to drop in and get a little drink at the soda fountain. The clerk will lean across the counter and say, "Sorry, but it is no great chance to take. We got caught we not only lose our liquor license but we lose our drug license and then we are out of business for good. If you get your doctor to write you a prescription we can put you up a bottle to take away on your trip. But you can't drink it on the premises."

The reason for the change in the attitude of the druggists who would otherwise be friendly to the traveler is a new law that was slipped through the legislature at the last session without everyone understanding its full effect.

If he expected to become a candidate who would not sell any liquor to their best friend and Bridgeport's drug store dealer and the liquor law better than the drug store of any other city in the state.

In some places outside of Bridgeport it was an uncommon thing for a druggist to sell three or four barrels of bottled beer on Sunday while his neighbor, the saloon keeper, was not allowed to sell a single drop.

What caused the bottle traveling under the assumed name of "peach," wintergreen or "lunardi" to disappear from the soda fountains during the past two or three days was the heralded news that the new pharmacy inspector was coming in accordance with the recent enactment.

The inspector for this section is Thomas Shanley of this city. Under the law the commissioners will not give a liquor license to a drug store unless the state board of pharmacy endorses the application and states that the applicant conducts a bona fide drug store. The state board depends upon its inspectors to give them the information necessary for them to decide whether or not a bona fide pharmacy, an ice cream parlor or a booze emporium.

The inspector after sizing up the place and looking over the framed pharmacist's license and asking about the clerks presents a blank application for a liquor license to the proprietor. If he thinks that the store is a bona fide drug store he signs the application for the license the inspector then gives his attention to the fact that the document contains no mention to the effect that the druggist is cognizant of the law which revokes both his drug and liquor license if he dispenses liquor to be drunk on the premises. A bona fide drug store is one that has a licensed clerk in the store at all times. In case the proprietor is licensed and has only one clerk he must be in the store when the clerk is in attendance at all but where junior clerks were in charge and were accompanied at another place.

One of the leading druggists said today that he was glad if there was going to be no more whiskey sold but if one made it a business of providing special customers with a drink the others were obliged to do it or else lose trade. He said, however, that it was going to result in more liquor being kept in the homes and that more of the stuff would be drunk.

The passing of the bottle from the drug store soda fountain reminds many old Bridgeporters of the most famous drug store back room of the city ever had. It was a place where a centrally located druggist had scores of professional men among his customers and some of them were the most influential men in town. They would all come down town on a Sunday for their "morning's mornin'." People going to church used to look in at the big crowd in the store and were suspicious. Finally the druggist, not wishing to disturb his distinguished clientele decided to close the back room. He stocked the room with liquor and cigars and had the entrance from another street. The door between the back room and the store was locked and there was no one in the back room to wait upon the distinguished trade. The druggist rigged up a money drawer and all of the customers were supposed to wait upon themselves and make their own change. The druggist used to say that the lawyers could make more change better than the doctors but it was surprising how well this barkeeper's saloon ran.

But it was not the policy of the druggist to increase his patronage and after ten years the most of his patronage had left. He died and his son got too old to come down town on a Sunday morning and he closed the place up. But since that time it has been considered that a druggist who would not give a dignified old gentleman a "toner" on a Sunday morning was a very mean man. But now that the druggist is in question it seems that the druggist is going to allow himself to be called mean.

HIGH PRAISE FOR TAFT'S POLICIES

War Secretary Dickinson Says President Is In Sympathy With South

SPEECH AT TENNESSEE FAIR

(Special from United Press.)
Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Enthusiastic praise of President Taft's policies, looking to the unity of the south, was contained in a speech made at the Tennessee State Fair today by Secretary of War Dickinson, himself a southerner and a Democrat.

"It is fortunate," he said, "that the leader of the party now in control of our national affairs is earnestly and honestly endeavoring to understand our convictions and the reasons for them. He appreciates the extent of the irritation that has come from appointing negroes to offices in the south. He understands that this is a broad, deep-seated race question that cannot be ignored or argued out of existence and for the peace of both races it is the part of wisdom that such appointments should not be made."

President Taft has gone further than any Republican President to meet the needs of the south in establishing a policy looking to the promotion of peace within her borders. It would be a calamity if his efforts should be nullified and his good will alienated. No question of the south giving him political support is involved.

"I am confident that no thought of winning its votes has influenced his course toward the south and that even if he expected to become a candidate to succeed himself, he would, though confident that the south would vote against him, do everything in his power to bring peace where discord prevailed, and establish a sounder basis for dealing politically with the conditions that effect the relations between the races in the south."

Secretary Dickinson declared that it cannot be too often a settlement of the negro question in the sense that all agitation will cease.

"To control with any degree of permanency the negro question," he said, "it must be on such a basis as will appeal to the enlightened judgment, sympathy and co-operation of the people of the white race all over this country. This should be done with the highest degree of protection and justice to the negro compatible with white power and control."

QUAKE FOLLOWED BY HAIL STORM

Terrible Destruction to Crops in Southwestern France Today.

(Special from United Press.)
Marseilles, Sept. 23.—A second earthquake was felt in a large section of southwestern France today. The quake itself caused little damage but it was followed by a terrific hailstorm which did considerable damage to the crops of the towns of Lambesc, St. Canal, Lepu, St. Reparade and Romane and the country surrounding them and in several places old walls fell down.

The destruction of the crops will cause intense suffering for the affected section but it has been seriously damaged by the quake of several weeks ago and the more recent floods.

FRANK WEST SUICIDE

BOATS CEEDED IN CHARITIES BUILDING

General Walkout Threatened by Those Who Occupy City's Big Structure.

A general walk out has been threatened by the city officials in the Police and Charities building because of the dampness there. Miss Mary Finegan, nurse of the anti-tuberculosis dispensary, has pledged her co-operation. All, except the janitor and his assistant, are up in the air.

The walls are dripping with perspiration. The moisture has formed in little pools on the floor. The windows look like frosted glass except where trite phrases have been traced on them by the people who must remain in the building. Dave Jack put on a spick and span jumper when he went to work yesterday morning, after his three weeks' vacation, and Mrs. Jack put it through the wringer last night. Dr. Kiernan, night surgeon at the Emergency hospital, threatened to quit on the spot when he went to his room and put his hand on the bed clothes. The bed was having a cold sweat. Heads and shoulders stood on his mirror and from every wall a small stream trickled and formed a pool in the middle of the room.

Chauffeur Burlison of the auto-ambulance talked to the doctor for a few minutes and finally persuaded him to stick to the ship, and Mrs. Jack offered him one of her rooms which he accepted. Mrs. Burlison was fortunate in having a gas stove in her apartment and after the steam, which had been formed by the evaporation of the water on the walls owing to the heat, had cleared away she could put her hands on a chair or table without having a towel around to wipe them off.

In the city court this morning Attorney J. Cohn while addressing the court the wicket of his hand on the prosecutor's table, but withdrew it as if he had put it in a pail of water.

To cap the climax, when Miss Finegan went to her office this morning in the dispensary on the top floor of the police station, the door was stuck and she was unable to get in. When she did get in a heavy mist hung over everything. She tried to raise her desk, but couldn't. She attempted to lift the top of her typewriter desk, but there was nothing doing there. Being a woman of few words Miss Finegan started hot foot for the door and the janitor asked him what he meant by turning on the hose in her rooms. The janitor referred her to the weather man.

CHICAGO POLICE GRAFTER CONVICTED

The verdict was reached at 1 a. m. after the jury had been out for seven and one half hours but was not read until court opened at 9:30.

The verdict carried with it imprisonment for from one to five years in the state penitentiary.

The court announced its decision would be set for argument on this motion. In the meantime he released McCann stating that his bond would stand.

The hat question is solved easily here.

It takes people who think to accomplish anything. The milliner who blindly follows somebody else, never does anything worth while. It takes thought as well as skill to produce hats that are different. Howland hats are different. Our millinery folks are thinking folks. They plan hats with their brains as well as their fingers. They do not take a Paris-made hat and copy it. They take that Paris hat simply for an inspiration—and from it they evolve such hats as we are now showing.

Howland hats have individuality, and beauty, and taste, and adaptability. They are of tasteful material, and skillfully made—but, more than that, they are made by folks who think. That is the one thing that gives them individual distinction, that has won such number of friends, and it is more noticeable than ever in the hats now ready.

Come, and see, and enjoy, and be made glad.

Rich diagonal.

It is a diagonal season, in woollens.

There seems to be no other weave one-half so popular. As a result, there is scarcity of good ones—except in stores where foresight led to preparedness for the demand.

Plenty here, we are glad to say.

Among some just arrived, though bought long ago, is a rich two-toned diagonal in a striped effect. It is of rough weave and yet has a satiny finish which is very charming. It is 54 inches wide, is in all the liked colors of the season including raisin, sells at $1.50 a yard.

Silk beauty.

True examples of real silk beauty are plenteous at the silk section. Silks there are that are truly lovely, silks that show rare combining of color and design, silks that have novelty blended with excellent taste.

Here are striped silks of unique design. Alternating stripes are of rich plain moire and of peacock stripe. Beautiful. $1.25 yard.

Glorious plaids with broad peacock stripes giving them distinguished attraction. Colors are almost superb. $1.50 yard.

Tinsel-brocaded silks in handsome light and dark effects. These are favorite for making up into little vests to be worn with the fashionable costume of diagonal. $1.25 yard.

Many many plaids in glowing and in subdued colors and in wide and narrow-banded designs—$1 a yard.
